The aim of The Australian Tax Research Foundation is to research taxation at all levels of government with a view to arriving at systems which are simple, fair and efficient. To this end, the Foundation commissions expert and impartial research into all aspects of taxation systems in Australia which are of current concern and relevance to Governments and the wider community. By publishing the results of its studies and the proceedings of its conferences the Foundation aims to make its work available to all Australians with an interest in taxation reform.

ATRF publications provide beneficial reading for all those concerned with the formulation of tax policy; business; union; welfare and other interest groups and tertiary institutions.
